PLANE FLIES PACIFIC 140 MILES AN HOUR

Smith Starts, Returns, Gives Up Flight

Municipal Airport, Oakland, Cal., June 28 (INS).—Fate today favored the huge army tri-motored Fokker plane, C2, manned by Lieuts. Lester Maitland and Albert Hegenberger, a native of Boston, in the race to be first to span the Pacific between California and Hawaii. The big ship was far out on the ocean, speeding at 140 miles an hour when Ernest L. Smith, civilian entry in the race, got off to a false start.

The Fokker got away at 7:09½ a. m., California time; 11:09½ a. m., Boston time.

Smith, an air mail pilot, and his navigator, Charles Carter, hopped off two hours and twenty minutes later, in an effort to catch and pass the army ship, but were forced by a broken wind deflector to return.

Repairs took so long that Carter announced: "There is no use starting now. The army will be there first."

The news that the Fokker was making 140 miles an hour was received with consternation by the Smith backers, especially when he was forced to come back.

This was because it had been stated that the army plane would not go more than 110 or 115 miles an hour and Smith had announced he would start off at 90 then increase to 125 or 130 and consequently be able to give the army boys several hours' start and yet land in Honolulu ahead of them.

50,000 See Smith's False Start

Smith had departed under the stimulus of a delirious ovation from a crowd of 50,000. When his plane returned, the crowd was stunned.

Frantic workers were at the broken part in an instant after his return.

The huge olive drab army eagle was then winging its way approximately 300 miles at sea.

That Smith and Carter were able to negotiate a landing without damage to their plane or loss of their lives was regarded by aviation men as barely short of a miracle.

POLICE TO SEIZE MAN IN MATHESON SLAYING

Maybelle Matheson, sleeping in the still hush of the little cemetery in Whycocomagh, N. S., is about to be avenged.

Tonight, by an unrevealed method of transportation and from an unrevealed rendezvous, a group of Boston police officers will leave Boston for a destination that cannot yet be told.

When they return they expect to have with them the man who will be charged with the murder and against whom an indictment will be sought from the Grand Jury.

Wholly unsuspecting, this man has been located in a city far from the Hub, a city of a State to the Southwest of Boston.

(Copyright, 1927, by Star Co.)

YESTERDAY the big Pons-Winnecke comet flew by the earth, only 3,500,000 miles away, traveling eighteen and one-half miles per second. That speed, 66,600 miles an hour, is slow compared with the speed of light, which goes 186,000 miles a second.

And light travels slowly compared with thought, which can transplant itself instantaneously to another universe in distant space, 1,000,000 light years away.

THE FOURTH OF JULY comes soon. Protect your children. Surgeons paint the skin thoroughly with iodine, that it may be absolutely disinfected, all germs on the surface killed before cutting into it. This makes operating safe. No germs go into the wound, with the knife.

WHEN A FIRECRACKER explodes in a child's hand, it blows disease germs into the flesh, beyond reach of iodine, and without immediate surgical attendance serious consequences are probable. Lockjaw is often caused by apparently trifling Fourth of July accidents.

Army Plane Speeds Far Over Pacific in Flight to Hawaii From San Francisco

The heavy load they were carrying was a severe test for the landing gear, but they made a landing perfectly.

Arthur Wilde, chief mechanician, who designed the gear, said it was intended to withstand terrific pressure, and the aviators owed their lives to its staunch construction.

Smith was not disheartened, and ordered all speed possible in the repairs. While the mechanics worked on the wind deflectors, seven men held the plane on the fairway.

Smith's Backer Angered

It was said the broken deflectors could be repaired in half an hour.

"That shouldn't have stopped you," shouted E. J. Moffett, one of the financial sponsors of the flight, when Smith's plane settled to earth in the dust.

"We couldn't operate the nautical instruments against the wind pressure," Charles Carter, Smith's companion and navigator, explained.

After the army Fokker took off this morning Smith was tendered best wishes by Major-General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the Army Air Service, who had given Martland and Hegenberger a hearty sendoff.

"It is a race to Hawaii, I guess." Patrick remarked.

"Go get 'em, Ernie," howled the crowd.

"I'll grab 'em," shouted Smith.

Gen. Patrick declared the takeoff of the two Army fliers was much better than they had ever hoped for, considering the tremendous weight of the plane.

"It was beautiful," he exclaimed exultantly.

Smith again clambered into his cockpit, making a final inspection of his instrument board and controls, then got out and left the field.

In Colloquy With Backer

The Army plane skimmed out of the bay region at 7:25 a. m., sailing over the Golden Gate and out into the Pacific.

E. J. Moffett, financial sponsor of the Smith flight, announced at this time that Smith would not take off until after 8 o'clock, Boston time.

"We are studying weather reports," Moffett explained.

Smith early in the day had objected to an altimeter which was not of the grade he desired. He requested a small gauge instrument.

When the flier arrived on the field and discovered that the altimeter installed in the plane was not of the desired size, he rushed an order to Crissey Field for a substitute to enable him to fly at a low altitude.

Moffett rushed up to Smith's plane very much excited and exclaimed: "We won't take off for an hour and a half."

Smith, however, snapped "Right now!" and climbed back into his machine.

"Sandy" Sanders, a pal of Smith and his companion flier in airmail service, went to Crissey Field, San Francisco, for the needed altimeter.

John D. Durham presented Smith a horseshoe. Smith took it solemnly, spat upon it, and tossed it over his shoulder.

"It's too heavy, John, I'm sorry," Smith apologized, "I can't take it with me."

An unidentified man offered Smith an altimeter of the required type.

"I don't want this used unless it is used in your plane," the anonymous donor of the instrument declared. Moffett, Smith and the man with the altimeter then stepped inside Smith's private tent for a conference.

Crissey Field reported at this juncture that it had no altimeter to give the civilian flier.

Out of the Golden Gate

Meantime the big army plane which had taken off in a fashion that exceeded the expectations of the sponsors of the flight was lost sight of in the haze beyond the Golden Gate.

Fifteen thousand persons saw the take-off.

Gen Patrick's farewell to the fliers was a lingering handclasp with each and: "I know you are going to do it; God bless you."

The Fokker, before disappearing in the haze, reached an altitude of 6,000 feet. Five planes from Crissy field flew at the same 6,000-foot level.

Other pursuit planes formed a personal escort to the Fokker, flying on the same 6,000-foot level.

The Fokker passed over the Farallones, an island group 20 miles off the Golden Gate, at 7:45 a. m. (11:45 Boston time) and was proceeding steadily on its way in the 2,400-mile voyage of daring to Honolulu.

The army fliers were accompanied for 25 minutes over the Pacific by a fleet of eleven De Havilands. At the Farallone Islands, last land before Hawaii, the squadron broke ranks and all but one turned back.

"GOODBYE" OVER SEA.

In this, fleetest of all the Crissey field planes, were Captain M. S. Boggs and Staff Sergeant J. F. O'Callahan. For another ten minutes they droned along behind the pathfinders.

Then with a dip and a curtsey they turned and waved farewell to the men who are to be left alone for a day and a night with the sky and the ocean.

"They were going like a whistle," said Boggs on his return. "They were hitting a speed of about 90 miles an hour and were on a beeline for Honolulu."

Boggs left them at exactly 7:45 o'clock.

At Honolulu, Richard Grace was ready to hop off in a Wright motored plane for the California coast. He is out to beat the time that either of the others may make, as well as for the distinction of being the first to make this flight from Hawaii to the American Pacific coast.

Grace's plane was given its final "once over" by mechanics at the Pearl Harbor naval base and then taken to Kaula, where a runway has been constructed for the take-off.

Smith's plane was christened "City of Oakland" by Miss Irene Parente, daughter of one of the sponsors of the flight. She used a bottle of real champagne.

In the event either of the planes is successful in negotiating the distance, the pilot will not be eligible to receive the $25,000 prize offered for the first to span the distance, because, according to the rules of the contest, competition is not to start until August 12.

General Patrick early in the day set at rest all rumors that he would be a passenger in the army plane. "I will remain in San Francisco until the flight is completed. Then I will return to Washington," he said.

"Do you think they'll get there?" he was asked.

"I don't think so; I know. Success is a certainty."

Weather conditions were pronounced perfect over the 2,400-mile path between California and the Hawaiian Islands today. "Very stable atmospheric conditions prevail," Forecaster T. R. Reed of the San Francisco Weather Bureau announced, "and conditions are ideal for the flight from this coast to the Islands.

"From the islands to the 140th meridian winds will be moderate to fresh easterly during the next 24 hours and the weather partly cloudy with showers near the islands."

The army plane expected to reach its destination in from 25 to 30 hours, depending upon the winds encountered with 27 hours as the probable time required. Smith figured he would land in Hawaii about 24 hours after his take-off.

Smith expects to make 88 miles an hour at the take-off and to increase his speed soon to 115 miles. The army plane expects to travel on an average of about 105 miles an hour.

Smith's backers say he will average 125 or more and therefore might give the army plane several hours start and yet reach Honolulu ahead of it.

SMITH CONFIDENT.

Smith said today:

"We wish the army fliers luck but want to beat them to it. If we can land in Hawaii five minutes ahead of the army we will be satisfied. If we can't do that, the army wins, but we still will seek the distinction of being the first civilians to make it."

So confident was Smith that his plane would be buoyant enough to float indefinitely in case of a forced landing that he discarded his pneumatic life raft. The raft weights about ten pounds.

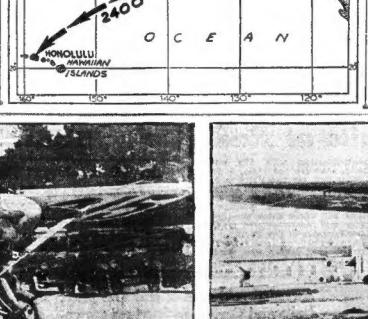
HUGE BIRDS IN DASH WEST



Fliers Due in Hawaii at Noon, Hub Time

BY THEIR OWN ESTIMATION, Lieutenants Maitland and Hegenberger, flying from San Francisco to Hawaii, should reach Honolulu, if all goes well, between 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. tomorrow, Boston time (or between 4:30 a. m. and 7:30 a. m., Honolulu time).

But should the Army airmen maintain the 140-mile-per-hour speed at which they were checked a short distance off the California coast, they should arrive at Honolulu shortly after 4 a. m., Boston time. However, their average speed probably will be closer to 110 miles an hour, giving them a landing at about 8:30 a. m. (Boston time) tomorrow.

San Francisco time precedes Boston by four hours, and Honolulu precedes by six and a half hours.

PACIFIC FLIER'S WIFE IN HUB WAITS AT RADIO FOR NEWS

girl, and wife of Lieutenant Albert Hegenberger, who, with Lieutenant Lester Maitland, is battling the elements of the Pacific in an effort to be the first human beings to bridge the Pacific between the mainland and the Hawaiian Islands.

At the side of the anxious mother and wife are the two children of the couple—Albert, aged 7, and Bobby, aged 3.

Only once, after taking up her vigil before the radio, did the young wife break down. That was at noon, when the first news that the flight was underway was flashed from Station WEEI in Boston.

Then came a catch in the throat of the young wife. She walked to one of the windows of the ancient house and gazed over the waters of Dorchester Bay toward Boston. Tears were falling from her eyes; her shoulders shook slightly with suppressed sobs.

Mrs. Hegenberger's mother, too, began to weep and placed a sympathetic arm about the shoulder of the younger one.

Then the wife seemed to get a grip on herself.

"You—you know how a wife feels at a time like this. I can't help it," she said, and endeavored to smile bravely through her tears. Then she resumed her seat before the radio, intent on catching every word about her loved one.

The young wife and mother has supreme confidence in her husband—she is certain he and his companion will safely pilot the giant Fokker plane to a safe landing in Honolulu—but her face denotes the strain under which she is laboring.

There are no telephones on lonely Castle Island—the telegraph station several miles away, in South Boston. The radio is all that connects the anxious woman with the outside world, and she will retain her vigil by the side of the radio until the flight is a matter of history.

Of the mother and two children, only Bobby, the youngest, appears unconcerned. He plays with an old air helmet and a pair of discarded goggles—once used by his father. Every time an airplane drones overhead on its way to the East Boston Airport, the youngster rushes to the window.

"There goes Daddy! There goes Daddy!" he lisps joyously. The little fellow thinks every plane in the air is piloted by his hero "Daddy."

Mrs. Hegenberger is visiting her mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Lindberg. Her mother is keeper of the fog signal on Castle Rock. By reason of this position, she occupies the rambling, ancient house on Castle Island.

The step-father is engineer on the Nantucket Shoals Lightship, but he is home for a few days—anxious to be near his step-daughter as she awaits each fragment of news from the Pacific

The Hegenbergers are Boston folks—both the aviator and his wife were born and reared in Boston. Lt. Hegenberger is a graduate of the Mechanic Arts High School, and spent three years at M. I. T. His wife is a graduate of the Winthrop High School.

SURE HE WILL WIN.

"I feel he will make it. Oh, I'm so confident," the young wife told a Boston Evening American reporter today.

"He is a good pilot and he has had much experience as a navigator, so I am confident," but the wife's attitude indicated plainly that mixed with her confidence was a certain fear and uncertainty that no amount of confidence could dispell.

"It has always been Albert's ambition to do something like this and I feel certain he will accomplish it.

"His plane is equipped with a pneumatic boat and even though it is a land machine it can alight in the water. I have no fear he will lose his life or that anything untoward will happen."

LISTENING FOR NEWS.

Even as she talked to the reporter Mrs. Hegenberger listened intently for the slightest scrap of news that might come over the radio about her husband.

In the midst of the interview a messenger boy who had made his way to the island handed her two telegrams. She could not restrain her eagerness as she tore open the envelopes. For a minute she was oblivious of everything that went on, about her—the reporter might

BIG AIRPORT IS NOT TO BE EXPENSIVE

Automobiles and airports.

Not closely related, one may think at first flush, and yet promoters of landing fields can draw a valuable lesson from the marvelous growth of the automobile, which is particularly applicable to Boston airport.

A few years back, if Mr. Average Citizen asked his neighbor, Bill Blank, if he planned to go to the auto show, Bill would reply:

"What interest would I have at such a show? Automobiles are only for the rich."

In a generation the automobile has become almost as much a household necessity as the telephone.

And the attitude of the average individual toward the automobile in the early days of that industry, is the attitude of too many short-visioned persons today relative to the development of aviation and airports.

The question is not whether Bos ton is to maintain an airport worthy of the name, but rather is:

WHAT IS BOSTON GOING TO DO TO MAKE ITS AIRPORT NOT ONLY THE FINEST IN THE UNITED STATES BUT IN THE WORLD?

This very vital problem is at present intriguing many of our most prominent citizens. It is a problem of such importance to the civic, economic and commercial welfare of the community as to demand the

ENGAGED TO 7, VANDERBILT GIRL WEDS

New York, June 28.—Miss Grace Vanderbilt, an heiress to the Vanderbilt millions, and Henry Gassaway Davis, 3d, a mining engineer, were married today in the drab setting of the marriage chapel of the license bureau.

Miss Vanderbilt is the daughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt and Grace Wilson Vanderbilt.

Since 1918, the year of Miss Vanderbilt's debut, she has been reported engaged seven times, the last time to Mr. Davis. Among previously reported suitors were Prince George, the youngest son of the King and Queen of England; Lord Ivor Spencer Churchill, son of the former Duchess of Marlborough, who was Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt of New York, and the Marquis of Donegal.

The ceremony was performed by a deputy clerk of the marriage bureau, the witnesses being Harry H. Armstead of the Engineers' Club, and a patrolman on duty at the bureau. Davis is a junior partner and mining engineer in the Armstead mines.

Davis was born 25 years ago at Elkins, W. Va., the son of John T. and Bessie Armstead Davis. Miss Vanderbilt was born in this city 27 years ago. Miss Vanderbilt's engagement to Mr. Davis was first reported in Washington, May 20.

MURATORE AND CAVALIERI ASK FOR DIVORCE

Paris, June 28 (A.P.).—Lucien Muratore, operatic tenor, and his wife, the former Lina Cavalieri, have applied to the Paris courts for a divorce.

In 1922 Muratore's name was linked in gossip with that of Muriel McCormick, daughter of the Chicago millionaire. He emphatically denied that he and Muriel were even friendly and said: "My wife and I are still on our honeymoon after nineteen years of married life. I expect we still shall be when God calls us away from earth."

His career has been featured by at least one battle with a co-star, Mary Garden. At the time both were members of the Chicago Opera Company, and the tenor's comment on her after leaving the company was that he would kill her "if she were a man." He said she called him a pig off stage and pretty boy on.

He then said he would never again sing in America while Mary Garden had a hand in Chicago opera.

GIVEN TWO YEARS FOR ATTACK ON GIRL, 3

Lawrence, June 28 (A.P.).—Herbert McKay, who gave his home as Bridgeport, Ct., was sentenced to serve two years in the House of Correction when Judge Chandler in district court today found him guilty of assault on a three-year-old girl.

HALF A MILLION TO START OFF; LOVE COOLS

They had a half a million dollar start in their married life, but they could not be happy. Mrs. Elizabeth A. Ingerman of Concord, former Memphis, Tenn., society belle, revealed today in Middlesex Probate Court in opening suit for separate support from Charles H. Ingerman.

Dan Ingerman, the former society beauty of the South, now a resident of Concord and mother of a girl in Miss Jessica Wellesley College graduating class, seeks the custody of two of the four children in their marriage, and the means to support them.

SAYS HE CHOKED HER

Directly after their wedding at Birmingham, Ala., Mrs. Ingerman said, she and her husband realized they had made a mistake, and she realized it more fully in the passing years when she claimed he five times assaulted her, once choking her so that his finger marks remained on her neck for days.

They were married in 1902, she said, and they separated in 1920 after the final alleged assault had ended with her assaulting a cut-glass water vase down on his head.

QUARREL OVER AGREEMENT

This quarrel, according to the wife's testimony, came when she refused signing an agreement under which she would take the two younger children, Vera and Kenneth, and he would take the older, Charles H., Jr., and Ruth (the Wellesley graduate of 1927).

Ultimately, she said, the agreement was signed, but she was compelled to buy and furnish her present home in Concord out of her own resources.

She testified that her husband was worth approximately $275,000 and that she, in her own right, owns a one-half interest amounting to $250,000 in Birmingham real estate.

BOSTON BOY ON FLIGHT OVER THE PACIFIC

The equipment of the two contenders is:

Army plane, radio beacon, transmitting and receiving set, smoke bombs, rubber life raft and all ordinary navigation instruments.

Smith, radio transmitter, plain magnetic compass and other usual navigation instruments.

PLENTY OF RATIONS.

Rations, army plane, one bottle hot soup, one bottle hot chocolate, a supply of hardtack and five gallons of distilled water.

Smith: Six pounds pilot bread, four ounces tomatoes, one pound dried apricots, half a pound cheese, thirty ounces seedless raisins, twenty ounces chocolate, a pound dried prunes, three ounces malted milk tablets, one dozen mixed sandwiches.

The Smith radio call letters will be WLO. It will be operated on 600 meters to enable ships at sea to pick up its signals.

Though the fliers will not be eligible for the $35,000 prize, the Oakland Chamber of Commerce announced it would give a substantial purse.

The army's final preparations were in keeping with the precision evidenced all through the months of careful planning. At 2:30 an army sergeant awakened his squad of mechanics. Each moved to an appointed task. One wiped off every vestige of dampness deposited on the plane by the night air. Another checked exterior equipment, another checked all gas and oil connections, and so on to the last minute detail.

Army "on Its Own" in Flight Over Pacific

Washington, June 28 (A.P.).—The army is "on its own" in the Hawaiian flight.

No special aid has been asked of the navy or the Shipping Board, as has been the case in past aviation attempts involving the covering of thousands of miles of ocean waters.

Ships at sea are expected to report the progress of the plane, but there have been no orders for the formation of ship lines to guarantee safety in the event of a forced landing.

ESTIMATED ELAPSED TIME—Army, 28 to 30 hours; Smith, 24 to 27 hours.

EQUIPMENT—Army plane, radio beacon, transmitting and receiving set, smoke bombs and ordinary navigation instruments. Smith, radio transmitter, plain magnetic compass and other usual navigation instruments. The army plane carries a pneumatic life raft, Smith discarded his.

RATIONS—Army plane, one bottle hot soup, one bottle hot chocolate, a supply of hardtack and five gallons of distilled water. Smith, one bottle hot chocolate, hardtack, a few sandwiches and an emergency kit of concentrated food, enough to last 10 days.

Smith expects to make 85 miles an hour at the take-off and increase his speed to 115 miles. The army plane expects to travel about 105 miles an hour. The figures are dependent upon the presence of favorable atmospheric conditions.

BULLETINS

Municipal Airport, Oakland, Cal., June 28 (A.P.).—Ernest L. Smith, civilian contender in the airplane race to Honolulu, warmed up his plane for a take-off two hours after the army's Fokker plane left the municipal airport on its dash over the Pacific.

San Francisco, June 28.—The C2 passed through the Golden Gate at 7:20 (11:20 Boston time).

'Will Do Our Stuff!' Maitland Wires Washington

Washington, June 28 (A.P.).—"You know we will do our stuff," was the parting message sent to the War Department today by Lieutenant Maitland, just before he hopped off with Lieutenant Hegenberger for Hawaii.

Maitland sent his expression in a telegram.

'THEY'LL FLY IT!' SAYS BYRD

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., June 28 (I.N.S.).—Commander Richard E. Byrd today predicted that Lieutenants Lester J. Maitland and Albert Hegenberger who have hopped off from the Pacific Coast for Honolulu, "will make it without fail."

Byrd sent the army fliers this message, "Best of luck. We are with you every step of the way."

New York, June 28 (A.P.)—The weather bureau this afternoon advised Commander Richard E. Byrd that atmospheric conditions were unfavorable for the start of his transatlantic flight tomorrow morning.

FLIERS GREETED AT GENEVA

Geneva, N. Y., June 28 (A.P.).—The Waco, piloted by John P. Wood from Buffalo, led the planes of the 1927 National Air Tour to a noonday stop at the Geneva airport today, landing at 10:50 a. m. standard time.

Second to arrive was another Waco, piloted by E. W. Cleveland, while the third plane was the Hamilton, piloted by R. G. Paige.

A crowd of nearly 10,000 greeted the fliers. They hop for Boston tomorrow.

WIFE WAITS FOR RADIO STORY

well have been a thousand miles away.

Then she caught herself. "They are both from Albert," she finally said. "They are personal messages, but he tells me he is ready to make the big adventure and that he will take off today."

Then the wife returned to a discussion of her husband and his flight. "You know Lieutenant Maitland, who is with him, is a wonderful pilot.

"He holds the army record for speed, and while my husband is going as navigator the plane has dual controls and they can relieve one another in piloting.

"And when Albert reaches Honolulu he will have a wonderful time. You know we were stationed there for three years—little Hollis was born there, and we have loads and loads of friends there. I'm not worried—not one bit—but I'm going to remain by the radio set until it is all over. I hope the broadcasting stations will follow the flights as closely as they did the others."

The young wife is 27 years of age, and was married to Lieutenant Hegenberger when she was 19, just after she graduated from the Winthrop High School. Until his marriage the young lieutenant lived at No. 685 Seventh street, South Boston. He was attending Tech when the war broke out. He immediately quit his studies, entered ground school at Tech and was then sent to McCook field at Dayton, O., as chief of the instruments section.

It was while he was attending Tech that the Winthrop High School girl became acquainted with the young lieutenant, but it was not until the war was over that the romance blossomed and had its completion at the altar.

John E. Lindberg, step-father of the young wife whose husband is winging his way across the Atlantic, is just as proud of Lieutenant Hegenberger as if the flier were his own son.

"I come from the same part of Sweden as the father of Colonel Charles Lindbergh, who flew across the Atlantic. Maybe we are related," said the light-ship engineer. "Colonel Charlie is all right, but so is young Hegenberger. They are both made out of the same kind of stuff—the right kind," he concluded.

Japanese Aviator Plans Flight to Home Country

Pasadena, Calif., June 28 (A.P.).—F. H. Asumh, a Japanese aviator, who served in the United States Army during the World War, announced today he was planning to attempt a flight to Japan.

"I would be pleased to risk my life," he said, "in the 4,300-mile flight to carry a greeting to the Orient." Asumh is a graduate of Keio University.

According to William B. Gemmill, attorney for Madame Schwimmer, Fred J. Schlotfeldt, naturalization director, has taken exception to her views on nationalism, pacifism and other questions, political and economic.

Police and firemen removed furniture to the street.

CLINE WAIVES JURY TRIAL FOR KILLING HIS FRIEND

Rockville, Ct., June 28 (A.P.).—Leonard Cline, novelist and newspaper writer, indicted on June 13 on the charge of murder in killing his friend, Wilfred F. Irwin, today elected to be tried in September by the court instead of by a jury.

Under a law which is effective July 1 Cline will be tried before a court of three judges.

Cline informed Judge Edward M. Yeomans when brought before him today that he would not change his plea of not guilty to the indictment.

C.V. HEALD BACK, SURRENDERS

Clair V. Heald, former superintendent of the Needham postoffice, who disappeared a few weeks ago threatening suicide after a shortage of $400 was discovered in his accounts, surrendered at the Federal building today in an indictment charging him with embezzlement of that sum.

The defendant was arraigned before Judge James A. Lowell, pleaded not guilty and was held in $500 for trial.

Heald arrived in Boston today from Maine, where he has been in a sanitarium since his disappearance, went directly to the office of Acting Chief Postal Inspector Theodore W. Swift in the Federal building and made full restitution to him before arraignment.

MOTHER KILLS 5 CHILDREN AND SELF

New York, June 28 (I.N.S.).—Turning on the gas in her home in Whitestone, Long Island, Mrs. Maria Freedman, 35, killed herself and her five children today.

Constant brooding since the death of her husband in an automobile accident recently was said by police to have been the motive. She dreaded placing the children in an orphan asylum.

Before turning on the gas, Mrs. Freedman apparently had placed two canaries in a small suitcase. They were not affected by the deadly fumes and burst into song when a policeman opened the suitcase.

Neighbors found the victims lying in the kitchen, which was filled with fumes from the gas stove.

A neighbor discovered the tragedy. Smelling gas, he tried the door to Mrs. Freedman's apartment, found it locked and summoned a policeman who forced an entrance.

Fire Marshal George C. Neal conducted the inquest to determine the fire cause, and among those summoned to testify were Fire Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, Walter Burke, superintendent of wires for the Boston Fire Department; Deputy Fire Chief Albert Caulfield, District Chief Victor Rosier and Captain Samuel McDonald and Lieutenant McTiernan of the Boston Detective Department.

FULLER HAPPY, GIRL RALLIES

Governor Fuller arrived at his office today with his face smiling and with the announcement that his twelve-year-old daughter, Lydia, will be back in health again in a week.

The girl probably will undergo an operation after a time, the Governor said, for her troublesome tonsils cannot trouble her if they are removed.

Little Lydia, eldest of the Governor's children, has been ordered by Dr. Curtis of Boston to remain in bed for a week and rest. She runs a fever at night, which reduces in the morning, but each night finds the peak of the temperature lower than the previous night.

BLEE TELLS OF AIR SERVICE

Lieut. Col. H. H. Blee, senior business specialist of the aeronautics branch of the U. S. Department of Commerce, was the principal speaker today at a luncheon tendered by service clubs of Boston in connection with the observance of air mail week.

With motion pictures Blee illustrated the work being done in commercial aviation. He compared the advances made by this country with that in Europe and informed his listeners that the government, while it did not believe in subsidies, nevertheless was bent on encouraging the development of commercial flying.

"During the past year," he said, "the air mail pilots have carried mail 2,292,264 miles, both day and night flying." With these figures and others he showed the gathering that the air mail was well established, safe and reliable.

Postmaster Roland M. Baker was chairman of the dinner. Among the guests were Harvey L. Sweetser, N. E. district manager of the U. S. Department of Commerce; Admiral Phillip Andrews, Mrs. Anna Pillinghast, Amelia Earhart, only licensed woman pilot in New England; Merton Emerson, Capt. C. W. Ford, Howard Cooney and Edward L. Weaver of Lexington.

The clubs represented were the Advertising Club of Boston, Air Officers' Reserve Association, American Business Club, Round Table, Civitan, Crossup-Pishon Post, A. L., Kiwanis, Federal Business Association, Boston City Club.

New York, June 28 (I.N.S.).—United States District Attorney Charles H. Tuttle this afternoon notified Major Chester P. Mills, former prohibition administrator here, and Congressman F. H. If you don't bring Chelmsford—don't come.

By these brief, if brutal, words eligible feminine members of the Chelmsford Society succinctly convey the thought that they have no idea of permitting themselves to be considered worthy of any tributes save the best.

What is the guest hiding—why Chelmsford Ginger Ale, of course.

Phillip MacGlass was for years a flat tire with the fair sex until his best friend told him about the Chelmsford Society.

Now Phillip is in constant demand and the Chelmsford he brings is the life of the party.

Here are some of the questions he can answer 100 per cent correct:

Question.
Why is Chelmsford popular?
Answer
The real fruit juice in Chelmsford is apparent. It's fresh, snappy and hits the spot.
Question.
How far does it strain the purse?
Answer
No strain at all. The big 4-glass bottle of Chelmsford Pale Dry costs only 25 cents. At the present market that's like finding 15 cents. Golden is equally reasonable.
Question.
Where can I get it?
Answer
Where can't you get it? Every good grocer druggist, delicatessen man or soft drink stand carries Chelmsford and recommends it. Why? Because Chelmsford drinkers come back for more.

CHAMBERLIN IS OFF TO ZURICH

Warsaw, Poland, June 28 (I.N.S.).—Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, famous American airmen who made a non-stop flight from N. Y. York to Saxony, Germany, turned their record-breaking monoplane Columbia westward today after a brief visit to the Polish capital.

During their short stay here the Americans were given continuous ovations. They were guests at a state dinner. The Americans said that in some respects the flight from Mariental was worse than most of the trip over the Atlantic.

RUMPUS AT TIDE POWER STOCK HEARING

Pandemonium reigned at a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission, today on the petition of Universal Tide Power Company stockholders for permission to issue more stock.

Hisses, boos, catcalls, cheers and applause from the spectators made such a din and confusion that the commissioners several times were forced to threaten the spectators with ejectment. One of the alleged noisemakers, a stenographer, Miss Rousseau, who was taking notes for the power company, was ordered from the hall she was permitted to return when she promised to be quiet.

The stockholders are divided one body wishes the company to continue under its present management. The other seeks to have a receiver appointed.

Former Senator Arthur L. Nason declared that while the Public Utilities Commission had granted permission to increase the capital stock $45,000, it really had been increased by $100,000.

He charged John A. Knowlton had been trading in the stock, and that $100,000 made in such transactions had been deposited to Knowlton's personal account.

James McQuaid of Lawrence claimed the company is sound and with more capital it can be made a success. A. E. Adams of Lynn said the company's plant at Saugus had demonstrated that electricity could be made.

It was while former Senator Nason was attacking the petition that the disorder broke out.

SCRIBNER LOVE NOTE IS READ IN COURT

"Zella Dear—I wish you were my wife, instead of the home I got. Why not make the change now than money could buy if I had your hair. I don't want money, I want a kind word and affection."

While George Carlton Murray, steel worker and the testified object of several women's affections, gazed at the ceiling and the walls in some embarrassment this letter, written by him to Mrs. Zella Scribner of Everett, was read in Middlesex Probate Court today.

Murray, who is known to his friends as Carl Murray, had just begun the stand in the divorce suit brought by the 100-pound Mrs. Scribner, husband and in which Murray is named as "the other man."

DENIES KISSING.

But after Murray had heard the letter read and had acknowledged it, he denied that he had ever kissed Mrs. Scribner, denied that he had ever sent her the roses then, or meant it now, and explained:

"I want no part of women. I'm through with them."

"Are you in the habit of writing love letters to women?" asked Counsel Silverstein. Murray answered that he was not.

Q.—Did you write this to Mrs. Scribner? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever kiss Mrs. Scribner? A.—No.

Q.—Well, these crosses on the letter stand for kisses, don't they? A.—I guess so.

Q.—Well, when you wrote that letter, did you mean it? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Were you kidding her? A.—I don't remember.

AFFECTIONATE AS FRIEND.

Q.—Are you afraid to say what you meant? A.—No, I'm not afraid.

Q.—Was Mrs. Scribner affectionate to you? A.—No, sir, only as a friend.

Q.—How many times were you at Mrs. Scribner's home? A.—Twice, the first time when Mr. Scribner forced me at the point of a gun.

Q.—Because of a letter she wrote to you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Dr. Scribner ask you to promise to keep away from his wife? A.—Yes.

Mrs. Scribner's open declaration of her love for Murray was testified to on the witness stand by Scribner's sister, Mrs. Greta Marshall of No. 107 Sycamore street, Waverly, who in 1924 and 1925 lived in Everett and was a frequent visitor at the Scribner home, living there part of the time.

LETTERS TO MURRAY.

The sister of Scribner also told of Mrs. Scribner writing on the average of half a dozen letters a week to Murray. In previous testimony it was brought out that no less than four women, including Mrs. Scribner, fought for Murray's love at one time.

"Did you ever hear your brother, Mr. Scribner, quarrel with his wife while you were in their home?" Mrs. Marshall was asked. The answer was, "Yes, on several occasions."

Q.—What was their quarrel about? A.—About Mr. Murray.

Q.—Did you ever see Mrs. Scribner and Murray together? A.—Several times. I saw them in January, 1925. I was living with my sister on Chelsea street and was going to the store when I saw Murray and Mrs. Scribner come down the opposite side of the street, arm in arm. I hid in a doorway until they passed.

BOY DROWNED IN FALL FROM DOCK IN CHELSEA

Falling from a dock in Chelsea creek, where he and a companion were fishing for crabs, Modesta Phillipa, 10, of No. 32 Medford street, Chelsea, was drowned today despite his young companion's heroic effort to save him.

John Pazyra, 12, dove in after him, but the current swept them beneath the Chelsea bridge, where Pazyra was forced to let his companion go after the drowning youth got a strangle hold on him.

EXPECT ARREST IN MATHESON GIRL SLAYING

He will be brought back here on a warrant carrying another charge than that of murder, and then the facts that the police have been quietly gathering in the past few days and weeks will be brought into play.

The police are confident that, this time, their fingers are closing on the right man as the murderer of the Nova Scotia girl in a fog-hung West Roxbury field on a Friday night in last January.

The tip came from a person who received it from a second person, who received it originally from a man charged with a crime.

The two policemen of a Boston station brought the special officer of their division into the investigation, as a result of which a long, detailed report was made out and turned over to Captain James Smith of the West Roxbury station.

In turn, the report was given to Sergeant William Tilton, who has been in charge of the original investigation since the murder.

BIGGER BOSTON AIRPORT AT SMALL COST, EXPERTS SAY

closest and most whole-hearted attention.

Soon a town or city without an airport will be about as lamentable as a compass without a needle or a ship without a rudder.

Progress has made landing fields a public necessity in almost every community of any enterprise and size.

Which brings us to the question: WHAT ARE THE NEEDS OF BOSTON AIRPORT AND WHAT SHOULD BE DONE TO MEET THEM?

Local experts interviewed by a Boston Evening American reporter agreed on a composite plan of improvement which could be carried out without any enormous outlay of funds.

WOULD ENLARGE FIELD.

The most encouraging feature of the recommendations was the unanimity with which they seemed to be supported by technical men.

It was suggested by men closely identified with Boston Airport and its needs, that the present hangars and all kindred structures be shifted to the northeast corner of the reservation skirting Jeffries street.

The bleak and unused stretch of flats between the present landing field and the bulkhead on the west, fronting on the inner harbor should, in the opinion of experts, be levelled and surfaced with cinders.

The area skirting the east bulkhead facing Wood Island and Winthrop should be filled, levelled and cindered and all filled land utilized on the north as far as the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad tracks.

If this available land, most of which is now an unattractive, idle waste were added to the present landing field, Boston would have the foundation for what could be developed into one of the finest airports in the world, in the opinion of men who know.

The proposed enlargement would result in a landing area 3,000 feet square as compared with the present two runways measuring 1,000 by 400 feet.

In the sweeping expanse bounded on the north by the Narrow Gauge tracks and on the east, south and west by bulkheads and the sea, sufficient freedom for safe and adequate operations would be afforded, making it possible for a half dozen planes to land or take off where but one can land or take-off with any degree of safety now.

There are five hangars at present standing in the center of the vast tract, a scant half of which only is being utilized as an airport. Two of these hangars are being used by the regular army, two by the National Guard and one by Boston Airport Corporation.

Were they to be shifted to Jeffries Point and the entire flats filled and cindered the landing and take-off area would be sufficient to meet growing demands for years to come.

EXPANSION IS URGENT.

This expansion plan appears to be not only feasible but urgent under prevailing conditions. Experts pointed out today that the enlarged site would prove invaluable in time of military emergency, and that it would be an economic tragedy for the city and State to lose any part of the area now so easily convertible to airport use.

The same experts explained that Boston's airport site is ideal in that it affords perfect approaches for taking-off and landing. The only obstruction, and that comparatively slight, are the group of tenement houses and scattered old buildings on the South side of Jeffries street. Otherwise all sides are entirely free.

There is an indentation or sort of slip in the West bulkhead in the rear of Jeffries street. This could be utilized for seaplanes. It was pointed out today by experts that no facilities whatever are available for caring for seaplanes at Boston airport. This is a feature that warrants immediate attention, it was said.

While a sit could be selected for the present five hangars in the clearing on the left of Jeffries street, it was pointed out that value would be given to the enlarged airport tract if the four or five tenement houses and the old red brick factory on the southerly side of Jeffries street were removed, thus straightening the line as far as Jeffries Point Yacht Club.

This would involve an expense not immediately necessary, it was explained, but that the present and additional hangers should be located on the Jeffries Point edge of the airport was indorsed by all those interviewed.

IDEAL AIRPORT SITE.

Hearty indorsement of this enlargement plan was given by B. F. Billings, manager of operations of the Boston Airport Corporation; Captain Horace N. Helsen, commandant of the airport; Samuel Jewell, district manager of Colonial Air Transport, Inc.; Major Charles Wooley, commanding 101st Observation Squadron, Massachusetts National Guard, and others.

It was pointed out by several of these authorities that Boston is ideally situated geographically, in that it is 200 miles nearer Europe than New York, in a direct line for transatlantic flying and ideal as an airport.

FLIERS SEEN IN WOLF'S WINDOW

A most remarkable collection of the famous fliers of today is to be seen in the windows of Wolf's, 339-343 Washington street, as a part of the celebration of aviation week.

The collection includes not only Colonel Lindbergh, but also Captain Coli and Captain Nungesser, whose heroic efforts in transatlantic flight are still a source of keen interest and the most profound sorrow. There are group scenes of President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge and young Lindbergh and his mother.

The photographs were obtained by Mr. Bernard M. Wolf in New York and are huge enlargements, measuring sixty inches in height and forty inches wide.

The Fierce Bright Flame

"TAKE OFF your sweater, Doris—you're a regular little oven." Strange how literally that is true!

For night and day, the growing bodies of our children are burning almost fiercely with a flame too bright for any mortal eye to see—the flame of life itself.

"Metabolism" the textbooks call it. Brighter, hotter, more swiftly consuming in childhood than in later years.

And how carefully it must be fed: for only out of the fuel you give it can strong bones, firm muscles, sound, healthful teeth be built.

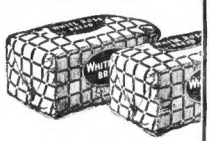
That is why thoughtful mothers everywhere today are giving more and more time and thought to the selection of the right foods.

And why so many mothers are hailing White Rose Bread as an achievement of great significance in modern diet.



Notice the firm, even texture of White Rose Bread. See how much its full, rich flavor adds to each meal.

For White Rose Bread has been perfected with the help of the finest food specialists in America—experts who know the needs of growing children as well as the preferences of busy housewives.

Into it goes almost twice as much milk as the ordinary recipe calls for—sugar of the very same grade you use on your own table—the finest shortening that can be bought.

Then this loaf is "slow-baked" to give it the character of the finest home-made bread.

A new richness—new goodness—new body-building nourishment. You will notice the difference the very moment you try White Rose Bread.

Serve this finer loaf to your own family today. White Rose Bread is baked twice daily and rushed to your grocer so that you may have a fresh loaf whenever you buy.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON HUB SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

New York Yachts to Get Royal Welcome at Marblehead; Event to Add to Gaiety of the Popular North Shore Resort.

A ROYAL RECEPTION AWAITS THE NEW YORK YACHT CLUB major yachts when they come to anchor in Marblehead sometime on Friday next. Commodore Charles Francis Adams of the Eastern cohorts, with his clubmates, plans a dinner for th visitors which will fittingly inaugurate the Fourth of July week-end festivities. The big yachts come up from Newport and join the Eastern major yachts for some important races and the annual Eastern cruise. "Over the Fourth"

HENDRICKS HALLET WHITMAN MARJORIE MOTLEY

Youthful Back Bay is as fond of the Public Garden swan boats as are the youngsters from other walks of life. These two young people are enjoying their trip hugely.

has long been dedicated in and about Marblehead to the amateur sailor of the deep water, not the reclining-chair variety), and this year promises to outrival all others.

A VERITABLE FOREST OF masts will rise in the deep-water, rocky-shored harbor each sundown, after the day's racing is over and yachts of all sorts drop anchor. Sleek and lordly steam yachts, spick and span as to paint and bright-work, will be there. And staunch seagoing cruisers. And fleet white sloops and schooners with sails like enormous wings. And all manner of small fry. In truth it will be the very elite of the yacht world hereabouts—taking the Eastern and Corinthian and visiting fleets together. There's no sight quite equal to Marblehead "Over the Fourth."

THE FINE OLD "CONSTELLATION" will likely occupy her accustomed place at anchorage near the mouth of the harbor. Mr. Herbert M. Sears, her owner, has had this history-making yacht down at New London for the boat race, and is enroute to Marblehead via Newport where he remained for the New York Yacht Club races. The "Vanitie" and the "Resolute" will probably be on hand. Harold Vanderbilt may put in an appearance with his interesting new racing craft. The "Queen Mab" with the Horace Hinneys aboard may come up from Newport. At all events there'll be a merry contest among the major boats for the Puritan and the Cleopatra's Barge Cup, and a big fleet to weigh anchor on the Eastern's annual cruise.

EX-COMMODORE NATHANIEL F. AYER of the Eastern is taking his Lynx on the cruise. The Lynx is, I believe, the 4th or so of the name that Mr. Ayer has owned during his yachting career. She was built in the Adriatic for George D. Batcheller, but became the property of Mr. Ayer even before completion. In a bright new coat of shining paint she now rides at anchor in Marblehead all prepared for the cruise, after a trip from Bristol with Mr. and Mrs. Ayer aboard. Mr. Ayer is to have John S. Lawrence, James Burgess and Charles Belknap for shipmates on the cruise.

MRS. PARKER HAMILTON (Hildegard Kuhnhart) was a quaint figure in her mother's wedding gown, the ivory toned satin of yesterday with its snug basques and full round skirt in marked contrast to today's accepted straight lines. A certain simplicity quite befitting a country wedding attended the Kuhnhart-Hamilton nuptials, celebrated at 4 yesterday afternoon in St. Paul's Church out in the little settlement of North Andover. The bride is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Kuhnhart of Hardscourt in Andover, came out several years ago and followed up her social entree by a college course at Vassar.

TO BE A PALFREY GIRL IS, apparently, to be a star at tennis. And now the small Joanna, fifth daughter in the John Gorham Palfrey family, joins her sisters, the Misses Polly, Minnie, Lee and Sarah, in the spirited game. Young boys and girls trying their powers out at Longwood came out in numbers for yesterday's opening matches and the Misses Sarah and Joanna figured in several.

GIRLS' SINGLES AND doubles and similar events for boys go on practically throughout the week. So Longwood will be a mecca for many a fond maternal parent who will find it a pleasant interlude to sip tea on the spacious club verands as she watches small son or daughter battle for supremacy. The youngsters appear to take their tennis seriously and pass opinions on one another's technique with the confidence of veterans.

South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the salient points in the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with his method.

These hands must not be bid or played "Double Dummy," i. e., as though all four hands were exposed.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

With but two small Spades in hand and the other three suits stopped, it is imperative for Third Hand to deny the Dealer's Spade bid with a No Trump.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 2. The Diamond suit having been opened, Spades afford the best opportunity of establishing a long suit and a double finesse is taken.

Trick 5. As it is evident that the King and ten of Spades are both in East's hand, it is necessary that a Heart trick be established immediately in order to go game.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

FILENE TELLS HOW NATIONS CAN PROSPER

Stockholm, June 28.—A nation cannot be prosperous unless its neighboring nations are also prosperous, the fourth general congress of the International Chamber of Commerce was told today by Edward A. Filene, prominent Boston merchant.

Mr. Filene made a strong appeal for economic co-operation among the nations, pointing out that only through this co-operation can any individual country assure its own prosperity.

"As world conditions are today surpluses of goods will be produced," Mr. Filene declared. "Modern mass production is increasing the volume of these surpluses, making foreign outlets an imperative necessity. If surpluses cannot be exported, there comes super-competition at home, ruining wages and profits and causing social and political discontent."

PROFITABLE MARKETING.

Mr. Filene urged that unless the neighbor nations see in a prosperous state, they cannot buy freely in the world's markets, and unless they are producing as efficiently as the most efficient nations, the goods they want to export will cost too much to sell profitably in the world's markets.

Mr. Filene declared the greatest welfare of every nation depends upon its business men and statesmen, and all its voters, grasping the economic fact which he had set forth.

"Any nation that does not learn this truth and act accordingly will find political and social stability is impossible, because, without this policy in effect, large masses of citizens will lack steady employment, and adequate standards of living cannot be maintained," he said.

WHEN REMEDIES FAIL.

"As a result, also, proper remedies for national ills cannot be applied, because such remedies, following a great war, must be burdensome, consisting of heavy taxes, lower tariffs and similar measures."

Mr. Filene is one of the two Advisory Councilors of the International Chamber of Commerce, which he was instrumental in organizing in 1920. He is also a member of the executive committee of the American section of the Chamber, and is ex-officio member of its general committee on trade barriers.

GAS RATE CUT IN WORCESTER

A reduction of five cents in its maximum price for gas was ordered to be made by the Worcester Gas Light Company today by the State Public Utilities Commission, the ordered slash marking a second victory for Worcester gas and electricity consumers in a month.

The gas company was ordered to reduce its maximum price from $1.35 to $1.30 per thousand cubic feet, to take effect July 15.

Rich Man Quit on Day He Was Sued by Niece

Just as social and business Boston was gasping at the sensational charges brought by Mrs. Anna Ray Chatman Bellian, granddaughter of the late Governor Oliver Ames, against her uncle, Oakes Ames, and her aunts, Mrs. Ames and Mrs. Evelyn Hall, there came another shock when it was learned that Oakes Ames had resigned as trustee of his niece's fortune.

Mrs. Bellian charged that the three relatives named, with representatives of the American Trust Company, had induced her, when she was peculiarly and mentally exhausted from sitting up with her dying mother, to sign away her rights to the use of the fortunes left by her grandfather and mother.

Oakes Ames' resignation as trustee was signed on the same day that Mrs. Bellian filed her suit in Superior Court, but Attorney Burton E. Eames, counsel for Oakes Ames, said that his client had no knowledge that the suit was filed when he resigned, nor had the resignation anything to do with the court action.

Ames, through his attorney, makes complete denial of the charges brought by Mrs. Bellian, and said that there is no basis for the implications contained in the nearly 1000 questions filed by her counsel, Attorney Jesse D. Crook, which Attorney Crook demands that he answer under oath.

Attorney Eames filed a demurrer saying that Mrs. Bellian has not stated such cause for action as entitles her to relief in equity, and he added that there are parties in interest in the trust who are not named in the action.

If the Supreme Court sustains Attorney Eames' contention the suit is automatically ended.

Rockland, Me., June 28.—Boy Scouts, Coast Guardsmen and citizen posses organized today to search Clark's Island, believed to be the hiding place of a tramp who answers the description of Charles Taylor, wanted in connection with the murder of Stella Kale at Salisbury Beach.

For a week the man has been hiding in the caves on the island and foraging for food in nearby districts. Women and children have been frightened by his appearance. Dover, N. H., police have been asked by Mrs. Mathias Poirer of Waterville to inform her if her brother is the suspected slayer. She wrote to them fearing that he is the man being sought. He has been missing sixteen years.

MILK EMBARGO ON MONTREAL

Scranton, Pa., June 28 (A.P.)—Health officials of Montreal, New York State were directed by Dr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., State health commissioner, to exclude from their district all importations of milk or milk products originating in Montreal or in the vicinity of the Canadian metropolis.

In his warning, sounded at the convention of public health officers today, Dr. Nicoll said Montreal was in the grip of the greatest typhoid epidemic of modern times.

In a population of 700,000 there have been more than 7,000 cases of the disease, with a death rate as always for each 100 cases, 10 nearly 10 deaths. The epidemic began in January, he said. It was a milk-born epidemic and came apparently from a contributing point in the city, he said.

A Girl Who Kept Her Head and a Tiger Woman

CHAPTER XIII

"AND so you are stranded once again," said Mrs. Wisden. "It is really most annoying, Jill, afraid we shan't be able to help you at all. It is true Eddie has great expectations at the moment, but naturally you don't trade on them."

"Expectations?" Jill pricked up her ears. "Whatever of? Not money, surely?"

"It's not a subject I can discuss with you at present," her stepmother replied; "only naturally I happen to be in Eddie's confidence, and—well there is every prospect of his being much richer in the not far-off future for him—and myself. He would always look after his mother."

"Bravo! That's splendid!" exclaimed Jill disinterestedly. It did not disconcert her in the least that Mrs. Wisden's hopes of material prosperity in the near future in no way seemed to include herself. She was used to being left outside. She would probably not have come in had she been asked such being her aloof nature. "I daresay he'll tell you all about it himself," she added. "I do hope the poor kid will pull it off, whatever it is."

At any rate, Mrs. Wisden and her stepdaughter were at one in their love for Eddie—the mother for her son and Jill for her beautiful half-brother. She would have done almost anything in the world for Eddie. He had really been such a darling little baby. Jill had adored him in those days—a five-year-old girl, immediately proud and fond of her brand-new half-brother.

"I suppose it's an engagement," she went on.

"Well—yes," Mrs. Wisden intimated "a very important one." But she did not add that it was a matrimonial one and a quarter-of-a-million-pound one at that. It was only the latter Jill had meant.

The Pilgrim's Progress — By John Bunyan

Next, Christian reached a hill, where a Cross stood, with a Sepulchre below, into which his burden at last fell. Then three Shining Ones came to him, clothed him anew, set a shining mark on his forehead, and gave him a roll, which they said he must present at the Celestial Gate.

Joyfully Christian went on till he reached the hill Difficulty. The path was rough and steep, and half way up he was glad to rest at an arbor made by the Lord of the hill for the refreshment of pilgrims. There he went to sleep, and his roll, which he had been told to preserve, fell out of his hand.

When he awoke he hastened on. Two men warned him that there were lions in the path ahead, but Christian was about to continue when he missed his roll. He retraced his steps, found the roll, and returned to face the dangers of the journey. Suddenly he looked up and saw two lions before him!

Christian hesitated, but beyond the lions lay the palace called Beautiful. The porter called to him that the lions were chained, so he passed them and was welcomed by Discretion, Prudence, Piety and Charity. Here he rested. Then the maidens gave him armor to wear.

HUTCHINSON NOVEL FILMED AT ORPHEUM

"One Increasing Purpose," screen version of A. S. M. Hutchinson's widely read novel, is being shown for the first time in Boston at Loew's Orpheum this week. Edmund Lowe has the leading role of Sim Paris, a visionary young man whose search for the "purpose" behind the scheme of things provides the plot of the story. He tries to learn the reason for his good fortune in life, and the final solution of his problem forms a stirring drama that has been transferred effectively to the screen by Harry Beaumont.

Edmund Lowe

All the exteriors of this production were made in England on the locations described in the story.

The cast supporting Edmund Lowe includes Lila Lee, May Allison, Jane Novak, Holmes Herbert, Josef Swickard, Huntley Gordon and others.

The vaudeville program is topped by Lou Cameron and company, with Billy Howard in "Clown Capers," in comedy, song and dance. Perry-Mansfield Dancers, eleven clever steppers featuring Alice Mickey and Virginia Mae Gehl, are seen in a pleasing dance revue.

Annie Kent and John Harrigan, two Bostonians, offer a new comedy skit with a few song numbers. Other acts are Tom Wardwell and Jean La Coste in a song and dance turn, Noah Ferris and Harry Ellis, Italian dialect comedians, and the Four Readings, jugglers.

Comedy, news and musical numbers by the Hector and Hobbs orchestras, with Chonlers accompanying at the organ, are also presented.

Continuing Shows

COLONIAL—"Twinkle, Twinkle," a musical show in which Joe E. Brown is the chief funster.

GAIETY—"Kongo," a drama of the jungle, now entering its third week.

TREMONT—"The King of Kings," A Cecil De Mille production with the Life of Christ as its subject.

FENWAY—"Chang." Wild animal life caught by the motion picture camera.

PARK—"Cat and the Canary." A shock play of superstype.

IN TEST WITH BOTH FEET!

Jennie MacDonald of No. 89 Upland road, Cambridge, who has entered the Boston Evening American's Perfect Foot Contest. Valuable prizes are being awarded. The contest closes Thursday night.

Boston Evening American Staff Photo

As the Boston Evening American's Perfect Foot Contest draws to its close—Thursday at midnight being the deadline—the Contest Editor and the sponsors of the contest, the Kid Leather Tanners Association, are satisfied. Their quest has been so exhaustive that the winner may justly boast of the title with which she will be crowned Miss New England of the Perfect Feet.

With the title, Miss New England has been promised a gold medal designed by the Kid Leather Tanners, a cash prize of $100 and the most exquisite pair of kid shoes that the kid leather craftsmen can fashion.

These shoes and 24 other pairs for the 24 other contestants whose feet most nearly approximate the perfection of Miss New England's own, will all be designed by I. Miller & Sons and will be presented through Hovey & Co.

Second and third prizes also include silver and bronze medals from the Kid Leather Tanners, with purses of $25 and $15. To the fourth prize, too, will be added a purse of $10.

Today, next to the last day before the close of the contest, is not too late to send your entry.

The prizes will be awarded as a feature part of the great shoe exposition program at the Hotel Statler next week.

Surely, you will agree, this contest is deservedly one of the most popular of its kind that has ever been staged in New England. The thousands who have entered it are the Contest Editor's best assurance that this is so.

'TAXI DANCER' WEEK'S FILM AT STATE

"The Taxi Dancer" at Loew's State is a film version of the Robert Terry Shannon story which recently ran serially in the Boston Evening American. Joan Crawford is its star and titular character. Owen Moore plays opposite, and Harry Millarde directed.

The film's action follows the plight of a poverty stricken beauty in the great city. Hunger drives her to the lowly profession of "dancing hostess" in a cheap ballroom.

These dancing academy scenes are the picture's chief contribution to comedy. In bright uniforms the "hostesses" stand in a row and a flaring placard heartily invites the male patrons to "pick 'em and swing 'em at ten cents per whirl."

For the rest, all is thrilling melodrama in which the poor but proud beauty is preyed upon by some designing gentleman of wealth. There is a murder to further enliven the plot, but with the fadeout all is made right.

Miss Crawford is pictorially admirable and gives promise of stardom to come. The supporting players are well cast and more than adequate in their roles, but the keenest and cleverest sketch is from a minor part, a shrewd, conniving old card shark, played to the hilt by William Orlamond.

The State stage show is given over to Phillip Spitalny and his capering band. When not engaged with the saxophone, Steve Weniger sings ballads through a megaphone, and Johnny Dove furnishes some energetic dances.

ENTERTAINING ACTS ON KEITH'S PROGRAM

Well—there's a real show at Keith's this week!

Singing, with dancing, with comedy, with acrobats. Trixie Friganza, Lalla Selbini and Bert Albert and Ted Lorraine and Jack Minto who chaperone the prepossessing Mlle. Marverie Dasties.

Trixie Friganza is an asma large party with the same large bag of tricks—and you can say no more than that.

The stunts of Selbini and Albert in the "Butterfly and the Cat," are marvels of non-human gymnastics, especially those of the cat. You'll find yourself twisting in your chair in an unconscious effort to attain the same poses.

Maud Earl, emblazoned as vaudeville's highest-voiced prima donna, is also on the bill this week, as are the regular features—Aesop's Fables, Topics of the Day and a news reel.

5-CENT SUMMER 'EL' FARE FOR CHILDREN

Beginning July 1 and continuing through Labor Day, any boy and girls less than 14 may ride on all parts of the Boston Elevated Railway system for five cents, their nickel carrying them just as far as an adult's dime.

Announcement to this effect was made by Manager Edward Dana.

HISTORY repeats itself in Russia. Leaders of the French Revolution were destroyed by other leaders. Robespierre cut off Danton's head. Greater extremists cut off Robespierre's head. Charlotte Corday assassinated Marat, then Napoleon took charge.

In Russia, Trotzky and Zinovieff, who would have called themselves "Natural Rulers" of Russia after Lenin's death, are accused of treason. Their expulsion from office is demanded, and they will be lucky if they only lose their offices, not their heads.

Put your faith in princes, still less in any child of a revolution.

BEGINNING on August 1, air passenger service from the Atlantic to the Pacific is promised, the trip to take thirty hours.

First will come a straight line trip from San Francisco to Chicago, with transfers to Los Angeles and Seattle. Then a San Francisco to New York line, with the same transfers. Passenger ships will carry the mails, and flying will have started.

ONE CLERGYMAN, last Sunday, said Fundamentalists, believing, literally, every word in the Bible, and Modernists, who think there may be something in science developed by human intelligence, can never possibly agree. Fundamentalists and Modernists must stay apart.

The question presumably will not be settled until the Day of Judgment.

TO SOME it seems wicked to suggest that there was no lake in the Garden of Eden big and cold enough to provide comfortable swimming room for whales 100 feet long. Others believe that God, having created man with thinking power and animals with capacity for change, left it to them to develop the earth and the creatures on it.

TWO HUNDRED AND SEVEN Americans reported incomes of $1,000,000 a year or more in 1925.

In 1924 only seventy-five reported incomes of a million dollars or over.

Once a man owning a million was a wonder. Now 207 have a million or more INCOME and some have fifty millions of income and a good deal more through corporation ownership.

And the billion a year income will arrive before earth's phase of industrial feudalism shall pass.

MUCH TO its credit, the United States has 4,000 aviation landing fields, scattered in every State and the District of Columbia. And much to its discredit, New York City, richest congested spot in the world, with the most to lose in airplane war, possesses NOT ONE airport.

LINDY TELLS OCEAN FLYING PROBLEMS

MY PLANE AND I

From the Lips of Lindy Himself—Lindy's Opinion as to the Results of His Flight.

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

Copyright, 1927, Star Features Syndicate, Inc.

The sun is making its downward climb above the green hills of Ireland. It is several hours before sunset, but the fields are cool.

What a magic sight for one who has flown over dreary wastes of water for hours, for one who has seen icebergs and flown through sleet and fog until even courage began to whisper!

"Perhaps we better turn back."

Lindbergh, leaning out of the cabin of his gray monoplane, after a nightmare of storm, must have felt like the Spanish conqueror who climbed the Peak of Darien and saw the golden earth revealed beneath him.

BEAUTIFUL SIGHT.

"It was the most beautiful sight I ever saw," Lindy said in a moment of rare exultation. "It was great to see the hills of Ireland. I shall never forget them."

Weather conditions were satisfactory at the beginning of the flight, Lindy said. But shortly after leaving Newfoundland Lindbergh was surprised to see icebergs.

"After crossing the English Channel, I sighted the Seine. I did not recognize Le Bourget at first, thinking the field was farther to the northeast," Lindy continued.

LIGHTS PUZZLED HIM.

"I was a little puzzled by the beacon lights and the other lights on Le Bourget field, but when I circled I saw lights of many automobiles and felt sure I had arrived at my destination."

"Here are a number of problems that have to be studied before ocean flying can become practical and regular:

"First, the best route must be decided on. It may be that it will be better to fly by way of the Azores instead of over the great circle from Newfoundland to Ireland as I flew. Again, it may on some intermediary route will be selected.

MUST STUDY WEATHER.

"Second, a highly efficient study of meteorological conditions must be made before flying can reach the stage of scientific certainty.

"Third, the possibility of establishing air stations along the route. It may be that stations can be established at Newfoundland and southern Ireland or the top of England, or the coast of France or the Azores.

"I have been seriously thinking, too—without having made more than a casual study—of the possibility of building floating islands that may be anchored in certain sections of the ocean and which would provide landing places and shelter for planes that might have to decend for fuel or because of some trouble.

BRITISH PLAN 2 CLASSES OF CRUISERS

Geneva, June 28 (A.P.).—Great Britain today proposed at the technical committee of the Tri-Partite Naval Conference that cruisers be divided into two classes, one of 10,000 tons carrying eight-inch guns and the other of 7,500 tons with six-inch guns.

Both the American and Japanese delegations requested time to examine the proposal "in the light of the effect it would have on the navies of each power concerned during the life of the treaty."

A communique issued at the close of this morning's session said the meeting devoted to preliminary examination of proposals relating to the cruiser class of vessels. The British propose that this class be divided into two classes—an eight-inch cruiser of a maximum displacement of 10,000 tons and a six-inch cruiser of a maximum displacement of about 7,500 tons.

"We made considerable progress, some forward, some backward and some sideways," one of the American delegates laughingly remarked as the members left the meeting which lasted three hours. Each of the delegates said the discussion had been full, free, frank and cordial.

De Mar Describes Life on Vermont Farm

By GEORGE W. GRIMM.
CHAPTER III.

ANYONE who has worked on a farm, or lived on one, knows that a farmhand has little time to write poetry, study philosophy, or keep his fingernails clean.

When Clarence De Mar arrived at the farm of T. L. Knight at Bolton Hill, Vermont, he began to work. There were cows to be cared for, horses to be groomed, weeds to be removed, potato plants to be kept free of parasites, hay to be mown and a hundred other dull, dirty little chores. It was a man from [illegible] and tempest.

Three times Clarence did with a will. He worked hard and accomplished as much as the man on the farm. But he did not [illegible] and eternal round of work could not [illegible] of De Mar's mind. Soon, he knew, he would go to school and be crowned. Let the wood, at any cost.

THERE was a free school near South Hero called the Maple Lawn Academy. For three years Clarence sweated on the farm in the Summer, and did whatever chores he could in the Winter to maintain himself at the Academy. His method of transportation was that which he has been following ever since he had to run to keep the [illegible] Clarence had an idea that he would like to be a farmer and enrolled in the agricultural course.

De Mar did his first off-trail running with the Vermont Cross Country team. He was not the best runner on the track team, and he never finished better than fourth.

De Mar was forced to quit Vermont in 1909, without his degree. He returned to Melrose where his family, reunited after many vicissitudes of fortune, had established a home.

Returning to Melrose De Mar took up printing, a trade he had learned at Thompson's Island Print Shop. He was more profitable than farming in Melrose, and Clarence became a printer.

FEW persons who have seen De Mar plodding along over the B. A. A. course realize that the man holds a degree from Harvard College. Yet De Mar has a legal right to stand up, fire his hat in the air, and give three long cheers whenever Harvard wins. He was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Arts by Harvard in 1915, having earned it by taking University Extension courses.

The confinement De Mar was forced to suffer as a printer, after his years working in the open, was rather difficult for him to bear. But he could not abandon the only lucrative trade he was capable of performing, and took to training to and from work as a means of getting healthy recreation.

"HIS every-day repeated act, this running to and from work became a habit. De Mar was induced to enter various long races, but his performances were not spectacular as he ran principally for pleasure. But in 1910 De Mar made his total bid for fame by entering the B. A. A. marathon on April [illegible]

The somewhat spare form of the Melrose printer-postal [illegible] upon a warm De Mar ran second to Fred L. Cameron of Nova Scotia. The following year De Mar won the B. A. A. marathon and had established himself as one of the foremost distance runners in the country.

He was chosen to represent the United States in the 1912 Olympiad, but proved a disappointment by finishing [illegible]. De Mar explains his poor showing this way:

"I had never trained scientifically for a race. The rules I had to follow spoiled, rather than helped me. No coach can lay down one set of rules for every runner. I would never agree to the rules of any coach as I know myself better than any coach and know better how to train myself."

In tomorrow's Boston Evening American, Chapter 4 of De Mar's life will deal with his experiences following the 1912 Olympics, including his service with the American army in France.

Ruth Will Be Back in Lineup Tomorrow

When Hoss Pays 182 to 1, Bettors Almost Drop Dead

Chicago, June 28 (A.P.).—Only four persons known, including the owner, bet on a horse that paid odds of 182 to 1 at the Homewood track yesterday, and when the long shot came home a victor, two almost swooned, and another, a negro stable boy, turned handsprings until he was exhausted.

It was the Kentucky thoroughbred Blue Blood who wrote exclusive history for Illinois when she finished two lengths in front in the five-furlong race.

The horse's owner, Carter Everett, apparently was the only person in the park who wagered more than $2. He played $20 "on the nose" and collected $3,631. He was overcome when the odds were posted.

A glass of water had to be hurried to a woman in the clubhouse who bordered on hysterics when she saw that her $2 ticket across the board had returned her $366.18.

New York, June 28.—Five hundred thousand dollars worth of polo ponies arrived aboard the Atlantic transport Boer Monguwaska for the International polo matches to be held at Meadowbrook, L. I., in September.

All but six of the 47 ponies were from India where the British army goes in so heavily for the mounted sport.

Two members of the British army team which will cross mallets with the American representatives at Meadowbrook in September accompanied the ponies. They were Lieutenant Colonel A. De La Poer Beresford and Captain John Pitt Hennessy.

SMITH HAD MASK ON WHEN HE SLUGGED BANNY

RETURNING Braves give some new light on the cowardly attack by Earl Smith on Manager Dave Bancroft. Reports from Pittsburgh made it evident that the rowdy catcher of the Pirates was unjustified, but the story from the boys who were present makes one wonder just why Smith has not been chased out of baseball.

Nick Flatley

The big catcher, who weighs 200 pounds, sneaked over his punch when Banny wasn't looking, and while he, the catcher, had on his mask and the rest of the paraphernalia that protects receivers from foul tips and spikes. No chance for a comeback. It was simply brutal assault on the midget Bancroft, and that should not be tolerated, no matter how hot headed the attacker may be.

Big Smith has been "on" Banny for a couple of years. Manager Dave fined him when "Oil" was a Brave, and made the fine stick. Smith had stepped out while the club was touring. He found a few bootleggers, and as a result hauled himself, more or less hilariously, back to the hotel at 2:30 a. m.

He had broken two club rules and deserved a fine. He pounded on all the doors as he paraded to his room, and nearly caused a riot. Then to make the night complete, he playfully tossed a chair out from his bedroom window. Luckily, it didn't bark on a pedestrian's neck.

Smith, together with two other Braves, was accused and fined $200. He hates money, so he didn't hesitate to confess that he had not done any of the rough stuff, but had merely been around trying to keep the other boys quiet. His plea rounded so sincere that his fine was reduced by half. The other young men paid theirs, and said nothing.

Smith went to Judge Fuchs and demanded that the fine be rescinded. Banny refused and Earl was literally kicked out of the office, so abusive did he become. He threatened to "get" Bancroft, and has been yelling ever since.

On the day of the rumpus, Smith called Dave all sorts of names. The Boston manager appealed to the umpires, but drew no satisfaction. The arbiters are diplomats, and can be deaf when occasion calls. Banny walked in the famous fight inning, and as he was standing off first, the Pirate catcher threw a ball that way that missed Dave's ear by less than an inch. The first baseman was not even standing around at the time.

A hit scored Bancroft, and after he crossed the plate, he protested again to Umpire Barry McCormack. While he was doing that, Smith slugged him. Banny was out for the better part of an hour, and it will be quite a while before the scar of the blow leaves his chin, if it ever does.

No room for the Smiths. Some day he'll take a poltroon paste at somebody with a mask, somebody small, and then baseball will have a real scandal on its hands.

WITH TEN P. TUNNY ON THE JOB, JACK DEMPSEY WILL SOUR MORE AND FURTHER STYMIE WHEN FANS JACK SHARKEY. THE WARMUP ON THIS SCRAP SHOULD BE A WOW.

BATTLE OF JACKS TOUGH ON THE PICKERS

THE approaching cuffing match between Dempsey and Sharkey is likely to give the boys who speculate on such things a great many anxious moments. The most of them admit that Sharkey was a wonderful fighter while he was beating Maloney. They know Newton Jack has class and plenty of it.

They can't, however, forget the dazzling Dempsey of a few years back, the human machine that hammered the huge Willard to a gory pulp at Toledo. They can't believe that a few short years could change a ripping, tearing fighter into the stolid Dempsey that was beaten by Tunney last September.

The sun-bronzed, physically-conditioned Dempsey that has returned from the coast looks like the great man machine of former days. Nobody will know what's under the tan until late in the evening of July 21.

Dempsey, as idol, will probably be a favorite. He is attempting to do what no other heavyweight champion could, come back and drape the crown once more over his corrugated brow. His case, you must admit, is different from that of other heavies. Jack is still young, as mortals go.

CORBETT, FITZ, JEFFRIES AND THE REST WERE AGING WHEN THEY TRIED TO RETRACE THE HEIGHTS. THEY WERE ALL PAST THEIR FIGHTING PRIMES. THE BOX REFUSE TO THINK THAT THE HEARTS OF THESE MEN OF DOLENESS COULD HAVE SAPPED HIS FIRE AND VITALITY.

THEY will figure that he needed the Tunney war to get the feel of the ring back, that the licking was merely starting him again on the trail. They will not stop to figure that the young Sharkey has the vital flame, plus the desire to win combined with the ruthless strength of youth and love of the game.

Some experts claim that no man can let his body down for three years of easy living, and then come back with the old spark flaring. Others maintain that any husky mortal, this side of 35 as Dempsey is, can always return to the physical peaks.

The affair offers more chance for argument and speculation than any ring war in the memory of man. You can just about write your own ticket, and somebody will be talking in the rush to get it.

CALLOW LAUGHS AT TRADITION

Rusty Sends Washington Huskies Over Poughkeepsie Course on Eve of Big Race

By ROBERT A. HEREFORD.

Poughkeepsie, June 28.—"Rusty" Callow, who comes out of the West, which also gave Ed Leader to rowing, and who coached his Washington Huskies to the national crew championship last year, defied the gods of tradition and expediency when he sent his varsity and junior varsity eights, against each other in as stiff a two-mile race as has been seen on the Hudson in many a day.

That superstition which makes the football player insist on having a number 13 sewed on his jersey or prompts Eddie Collins to insist on a "local" instead of clearing a man's end before taking up the duties of first or second base has set many brawny oarsmen here in fear and trembling as coaches sending their shells over the regular course, a gruelling row-jumbling seven miles, on the eve of the National regatta.

DANGER OF INJURY.

Then there is the danger of straining tendons which might cripple a man's oarsmanship for the entire season. Callow, however, has gone ahead with his plans, and the Washington varsity and junior varsity eights are now resting after their two-mile race. Callow, although better pleased with the showing of his varsity, is not satisfied with the performance of his junior varsity crew, which he would like to have seen do better.

He did say, however, that the Washington varsity crew was the best he has ever had, and that he has high hopes that it will win the national championship.

GEORGE MOGRIDGE

veteran relief twirler of the Braves, who will soon be given his release so as he can manage the International League team in Rochester, N. Y., his native city.

Judge Fuchs Denies Groh Is to Become a Brave

Judge Emil E. Fuchs, president of the Braves, and Walter S. Hapgood, business manager of the Rochester International League club, both denied today that Heinie Groh, long a star with the Cincinnati Reds and New York Giants, is coming to the Tribe in exchange for George Mogridge, famous relief hurler of the Boston club.

A press dispatch from St. Louis stating that Groh and Jones were members of the Rochester team were to join the Braves and that Mogridge was to soon become manager of the Rochester club.

"I presume you have inquired so often of late that Groh and Jones are going to Rochester," said Judge Fuchs, "but I will say that Groh will not be with the Rochester club in the near future, so he is wrong. I have a letter from Groh at the end of the game I told Judge Fuchs and Hapgood don't say anything about any exchange of players because I am not going to permit it."

Judge Fuchs did say, however, "It is true, however, that George Mogridge, veteran relief pitcher, is to join the Rochester club of the International League as manager.

Rochester is the Braves pitcher's home city.

"Just now I will not let Mogridge out of the Tribal fold with a flock of double-headers on the calendar, but he will go eventually."

What is the Price of a good Cigar?

The price is what you pay for what you get.

Sometimes you get value for your money — sometimes you get less than you pay for.

When you pay seven cents for a PIPPINS CIGAR you get the BIGGEST CIGAR VALUE in the country.

It isn't the price — but what you GET FOR YOUR MONEY — that counts.

At 7c each there's no other cigar made that can touch PIPPINS.

The kind of exquisite Sumatra tobacco that most manufacturers would use on a two for a quarter brand, goes in PIPPINS.

Clean, long filler, the cream of the crop, goes into PIPPINS.

PIPPINS are always made full size.

PIPPINS are never filled with scraps or bits.

PIPPINS are New England's longest established brand of cigars—were popular long before any other cigar now on the market.

And because we sell MILLIONS of Pippins, you get them fresh and fragrant and full of smoke-happiness.

When your cigar dealer sells you a pack of five or ten PIPPINS he hands you the biggest cigar value that money can buy. And HE knows it.

Sometimes a PIPPINS smoker is asked to switch to something else or try another brand.

That's our idea of a first-class waste of time!

When a smoker wants PIPPINS—he wants PIPPINS, and not a substitute. Every cigar dealer who sells PIPPINS (and that means just all of them) knows that THERE'S NO OTHER CIGAR LIKE PIPPINS!

Shackled Souls

Author of "Chickie

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

CHAPTER 42

ROEN, putting on her hat, carefully and slowly tucked in a flying strand of hair. She was timid with reluctance—unwilling to enter the hall. As though it were she who had been whipped; she would be stared upon.

Girls from other offices were covertly sauntering back and forth waiting for Florie Fisher to come out. Others were jammed in the dressing room, giving excited, dramatic versions of the beating.

Half a dozen had seen Emily Barrons as she strode to the elevator, muttering, folding the horsewhip. They said her face was purple. They said she was going to kill Florie if she ever entered Ned Barrows' office again—if she ever looked at him. They kept opening and closing the door to see if Florie might be coming out.

Then they saw Gregg Morse leaving. And a moment later came whispering down Roen

"Did you see Florie! Was she much hurt. Come on, Ron, don't be a quiker. How did she look? What did she say?"

"She asked us to leave her alone. She is not going to come out of that office. I never saw a girl so determined. She told me to go. She won't see me. She says there's no use to wait. She is in her look turned to us and all she asked was to be let alone."

Gumm divided sharply at this—some pitying, others caustic. Too bad Florie didn't get exclusive control of flaunting her conquests in every office force!

"Florie has no one she feels sheep. Have to be in new house. Date to take a swim tipping for the likes of Ned Barrows!"

"How—the vice—girl has much it would cost her to show that he gave her a mink coat."

"He says he's such a fool she doesn't deserve to get away. Says he's going to get a married man's job and marry her. Why didn't she use her imagination and see where she was being led?"

"A girl who goes out after another woman's husband has no imagination or she couldn't go on with it," said toothsome Alice Rich. "If she had any she would see that she is—but all Florie's can see is speed."

"Poor old Ned the prince of all the hotels and excitement — minus a million dollars."

Soft-eyed Roen, proud, strong, unsatisfied, had taken another woman's husband.

It did not matter that the man was Mark, who loved her and whom she loved.

It did not matter, though they were divorced forever by the final, loathsome emotion—the divine was nothing, the sacrament—a wife was scorned.

And they two, though their love was a thing to last—and it was a beauty, were shameful—a affront of honor.

Their love, as Gregg Morse said might justify them to themselves. It would not justify them to the world's wife nor to the world.

And Mark's challenge—"All claims are paltry beside the supreme claim of your heart on mine and mine on yours," though it thrilled her though it voiced an elemental human law, was but a pathetic and little deft.

They remained outlaws—she and Mark.

She had never so baldly faced this. She had regarded Mark's love as a thing of high life.

She accepted it, intuitively, yet with the secret intuition that this was but an interlude. In this way she had been able to blot out the thought of Mark's wife. When Claire returned, Roen would eliminate herself.

Now, though shaken and unnerved, she reviewed herself with the cold eye of a stranger. Mark had a wife, who was unsuspecting whom he had encouraged in this trip abroad. In her absence and in her innocence she was betrayed.

Roen fancied her returning—suddenly discovering her home despoiled. She saw Claire as she violated her—sensitive, righteous—little appealing thing, moving away in shocked, incredible hurt. Grieving—yet because of her pride, relinquishing Mark.

Roen, who all her life had been the one wanted; who alone she was a little girl just 13 had sacrificed her own fulfillment, now found it unbearable, even in imagination to blot out another.

She walked about the living room, touching things—the old dresser—Bobby-dad's pictures—the dusty bobbin, she thought mutely: "I'll go away—"

No sooner did this idea take shape than Mark came before her. Go away and leave him? — send him back to Claire; to that pallid home where all that was joyous and living and vital about him had no being? Send him back to a destitution of heart and spirit more chill than death?

Send Mark, who was hers by every instinctive right, back to this? And why?

To save Claire?

Sacrifice Mark, whom she worshiped, for Claire? Deny herself—him?

Even if his eyes took pleadingly—"Roen, I'll go, too, she could not hurt Mark. She would never hurt him!

As the prospect of leaving him to Claire's mercy had only increased him — why this mad flight grew monstrous and impossible. Nothing could drive Mark back to Claire. She had never truly possessed him.

And now the prospect of ending their love seemed to her weak—paltry and weak—a thing that one who cares for himself—who would save himself might do. Not a thing she, Roen Ross, would consider.

She too got distractedly: "I'll pay! I'll suffer! Anguish—"

All at once she grew quiet—she said aloud and quietly: "I deserved better than this—"

Better than to be put in a class with Dove Fisher!

She stood before the bookcase—smooth—vaguely turning leaves of the books. Down there on the last shelf was the tattered leather volume of Burns. Bobby-dad used to read her those poems. Those and the old English ballads. Later, she read them all to Jackie, loving their haunting pathos even when she didn't understand the words. "Ed ward" and "Waly Waly" and "Helen of Kirconnel"

On the second shelf was the Yeats that Michael loved. For the first time in years she took it and turned to the poem he quoted her that Christmas night: "One man loves the pilgrim soul in you and loves not the sorrows of your changing face."

For the first time in years thinking of Michael, tears flew to her eyes. She felt him looking at her from his eyes both he and Mark looked out.

Suddenly she recalled a phrase that Michael in last letter. "I would send one to comfort you, dear, dear Asthore."

She covered her face. She was bereft of thought.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

In a wedding where the young couple is being married at 7 in the evening with only the bride and groom and attendants present at the ceremony, would it be appropriate for the bride to wear the usual white dress and veil and be known as a bride? The couple will immediately after leave on an automobile trip to the country, as it were, and have only a few friends come to see them off. Would fifty or sixty invitations be necessary?

2. What style to do the groom and best man wear, boiled or four-in-hand?

A READER.

NO, the groom should not wear a tuxedo. He should wear full dress, especially since there is to be a reception following.

1. The only rule that can be worn with full dress is a white bow tie, and the only tie that can be worn with a tuxedo is a black bow tie.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have a dress with the new dolman sleeves. Would it be proper to wear it a dress to a dance or party? If not, where would it be proper to wear it?

2. What should a girl say to a boy when he thanks her for a dance?

PEGGY.

YOUR dress with the dolman sleeves sounds too dressy to wear to an evening dance or an evening party of any kind. From your description it is apparently a day time dress and would be proper for any daytime affair.

2. Something that indicates that she too has enjoyed the dance—"It was delightful," or "That was such a delightful dance. I enjoyed every minute of it," or some other natural comment that will convince her partner that she, too, enjoyed the dance.

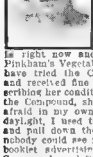
YOUNG WOMEN MAY KEEP WELL

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Here is Proof

St. Paul, Minn.—"Here is a little advice I would like to have you put in the paper."



Mrs. Jack Lorberter of 704 Dellwood Place wrote to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, "If young women want to keep their health and strength for the next thirty years of their lives, it is best to start in right now and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have tried the Compound myself and received fine results." In describing her condition before taking the Compound, she writes, "I was afraid in my own house in broad daylight, I used to lock the doors and pull down the shades so that nobody could see me." One day a booklet advertising the Vegetable Compound was left on her porch and she read it through. In so doing, she found a letter from a woman whose condition was similar to her own. "I bought the Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Lorberter continued, "and have had fine results. The condition I was in made me a burden to my husband. Now I ask "How is housekeeping?" and he says, "It is just like living in Heaven!"

"I'm not [illegible] about his personal appearance. I mean, was he a gentleman?" qualified Mrs. Wielen.

"Absolutely."

"And was he married?"

"He hadn't a wife here. He was a man. It was a man-every [illegible] and he'd taken it for shooting."

Mrs. Wielen's face was a study. "Actually never told you do a night?" was her next question.

"Slept," answered Jill hiccoughily "I never came to until the morning. Had been giving me brandy, and I went straight from my faint into a sleep. Then we had breakfast, and afterwards he motored me to the station. He lent me thirteen-and-six for my ticket, which I must send back."

"Only thirteen-and-six! But why ever didn't he lend you more?"

"Because I wouldn't take it, naturally."

"And you've nothing else to tell me? Are you going to see him again?"

Jill met her step-mother's eyes quite excitedly.

"Indeed, I'm not going to see him again. I never meant to. There's no [illegible] slightest reason why I should?"

"Was he attracted by you?"

"Why, ever [illegible] have been?"

Jill went into the minute box room which had been set aside for her as a bedroom. It was entirely devoid of furniture. Her belongings were all heaped on the floor, including the silver powder-box.

"Whatever's happened to my hat and things?" she inquired, coming back.

"I sold them. I thought you would be on tour for months."

Jill wrote a rueful face.

It was precisely what she had intended.

GOSPEL ACCORDING TO EXHIBITOR GIBBONS
From Film Paper

True, the scene of "Hotel Imperial" is laid in Pola Negri's native country, and true, she plays the part no to the manner born, but what part does she play? A tyrant, an inferior, a menial she-devil and a menial she continues to the end. . . . A role of that kind is a handicap to an actress of emotional reputation. That "Hotel Imperial" is a great play, well produced and superbly acted cannot be denied, but if the intention was to make Pola Negri a chance there is no chance coming to her!"—A. J. SELF-RELIANCE A GOOD FAULT

By LUCY LOWELL

SOME call him "Ole Self-reliance." And even though they admire him for the quality by which they have nick-named him they criticize him a little.

For there seem to believe one so sure of himself cannot help being obstinate and self-opinionated.

But others who know him very well indeed understand that he is neither obstinate or self-opinionated. They remember a time when he wasn't self-reliant; when he was a very clinging vine of a man wavering this way and that and full of doubt about everything connected with himself.

Then something happened—perhaps it was no more than a chance word coming his way—which made him see that self-reliance can be cultivated.

He was fearful at first; he knew a few whom he might observe and be guided by; persons who had the quality he lacked. But he was afraid if he followed in their habit of thought he might become little more than a shadow of them and that his beliefs and opinions wouldn't be his own at all but echoes of theirs.

But this thought suggested he needn't accept their beliefs and opinions—only the method in which they were acquired and handled.

Still later he grew to understand such discrimination must be exercised over everything coming to him from any source, that the first requisite of self-reliance is to be sure exactly what it may accept for itself and what it must reject as of no consequence.

And very shortly he found he was doing more thinking than ever he had done before and that when he had made up his mind about a thing it remained made up. No wavering now.

There was a time about here when he felt rather lonely, for it seemed to him development of self-reliance threw about him a subtle sense of isolation.

But this, too, passed, for he found that while his thought was an independent thing, it was able to fraternize with the thought of others in association and friendship. So he wasn't lonely any more.

And now he is a well-poised, charming and interesting person whom everybody is eager to meet as soon as they get by the idea that he may be obstinate and self-opinionated—which of course he is not.

And they call him "Ole Self-reliance."

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

NO man realizes what a fettered soul he has become until his wife goes away for the Summer and leaves him to his own de-VICES.

Just at first he has a sinking feeling that he is going to be lonesome and neglected and probably "get all balled up" about things. But after a few days of sweet, untrammeled freedom, when he finds that he hasn't perished of starvation or anything, he sits up, begins to take notice, stretches out from his long matrimonial cramp and discovers that life, after all, is full of sweetness and light—for a Summer widower.

* * *

Think of it! He doesn't have to get up in the morning until he feels like it. He can turn over on his good ear and take another beauty nap, and nobody will remind him that "he'll be late at the office."

* * *

He can drop his pajamas and his bath-robe in the middle of the floor, and know that he will find them right there when he comes back.

* * *

He can sing and splash around to his boyish heart's content in the bathroom, and fling the towels all over the place, and LEAVE them there.

* * *

He can wear his soft collars, his Scotch plaid socks, and his soup-spotted cravat and nobody will ask him if he hasn't any pride.

* * *

He can drink TWO cups of strong black coffee in the morning, and do his own worrying, without being reminded of the doctor's orders.

* * *

He can read his morning newspaper in quiet and peace, let his eggs get cold, forget his rubbers, and rush off without having to kiss anybody goodbye. Answer any questions or fearing to slam the front door.

* * *

He can go out to lunch with his stenographer—or with somebody else's stenographer—without the haunting fear of being discovered and "misunderstood."

* * *

He can sleep in an unmade bed, and NEVER get out a clean towel, wash a dish or change the pillow-slips, if he doesn't want to!

He can let his cigarette ashes and newspapers fall where they will, lay his hot pipe on the piano, throw his wet raincoat over the back of a velour chair, and put his feet comfortably on the satin sofa cushions, knowing that "nobody's heart will be broken."

* * *

He can linger over his desk until midnight, or make a dozen detours on the way home without consulting his watch or feeling that the dinner and "the devil" are waiting for him.

* * *

And he can wander home at 2 A. M., let himself in noisily and boldly, and clump up the stairs without fear of running into a human questionmark.

* * *

And yet—and YET, he is always as delighted as a small boy on Christmas Eve, when his wife comes back and closes in the mess he has made and puts him into harness again!

* * *

Freedom, like love, is a thrilling thing—but it's amazing how quickly a man can get "fed up" on it!

RADIO DIALOG

by C. WILLIAM RUOFF

SUMMER radio is becoming somewhat like the Summer weather. Some nights we hear a broadcast which could not have been improved upon in the best broadcasts of the year.

Other nights we hear something which certainly could not have been worse on the worst nights of the year.

Local dance orchestras suffer. With the above places attracting people, in-town restaurants suffer. Two or three musicians joker their orchestra for the Summer months. Result is that poor orchestration causes listeners to wonder what is wrong.

* * *

National advertisers in some cases decide to stop advertising on the radio for the Summer. They do not stop eating for the Summer. In business one is certainly as vital as the other.

* * *

But other broadcast sponsors know they are not in business merely for a few months or seasons. They understand that in trying to build up a permanent business they must always advertise.

* * *

Up in the studio and control of WBZA last Saturday about 8:30 p. m. there was wild excitement. Out in the control room dashed a young man trying to get somewhere before he started going. Over in the radio room the operators were galloping around with towels, opening switches and saying, "Look out, it's hot."

* * *

They carefully but hurriedly took out an overheated resistor which, when overloaded, was beginning had spoiled. A resistance coil had become defective. We did not discover it the reliability of any of the six, but neither did the pianist who kept singing out in the front parlor.

A Tip When Wiring

A good plan to follow when wiring from a blueprint or diagram is to place a crayon mark on the diagram over every completed connection

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

My neighbor's little daughter, Rosie, when asked by her teacher who discovered America replied: "My papa, I guess, for I heard him say that when he first landed here he was all at sixes."

To Help Young Graduates to Find Congenial Work

By B. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, June 28.—We hear much about June as a month for brides, but we hear little about June as the month of heartaches for the many thousands of boys and youths who pour out of our schools and colleges and encounter cruel experiences when they start the search for an opening in the world of work.

What can be done?

Progress has been made by our principal universities. They now encounter and receive applications from business organizations for students about to graduate. This arrangement has been so successfully developed by several eastern Universities that more jobs than graduates are sometimes available.

It is all true, however, that many colleges have not yet instituted any such useful plan.

STILL MORE lamentably unsatisfactory is the prospect which awaits tens of thousands of lads compelled to leave grammar school and high school. Little or no machinery has been set up to help them to find a footing when forced to face the problem of earning their daily bread.

The economic loss entailed is serious, but it is infinitesimal compared with the mental suffering inflicted upon the pitiable victims.

WHO ARE to blame for the continued existence of such a tragic condition?

Everybody in general and nobody in particular.

The fact is that school and college graduates themselves have been more or less at fault. An unbelievable number of them give absolutely no thought even during their final year at school to what line of work they would like to take up. Says C. R. Dodge of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey,

"As a personnel director of the Standard Oil Company I have had to do with almost 10,000 college men in the last fifteen years. And I have found this—that the college man with a purpose, with an objective in mind, is making like a fairly definite idea of what he wants to do, is a rare individual."

IS NOT the parent who never discusses their future with his growing sons criminally at fault? Is it not clearly the parent's duty to direct, diplomatically, of course, his son's mind to so vitally important a matter? Has not a parent who is neglectful in this respect only himself to thank if his son completely fails to find himself after graduating?

The youths, too, have a responsibility. It may not be reasonable to expect each forehead-graph of a boy of fifteen or seventeen, but surely it is not to much to expect that a college-bred young man of twenty-one or twenty-two should devote a serious thought to what he desires to do with his education. Here the faculty, as well as the parents, have a responsibility.

ONE ORGANIZATION is now doing valuable work, the Personnel Research Federation, with headquarters in New York. It has been "organized because there is so much economic and social waste in the way young people and mature workers find—or fail to find—their places in the world's work.

"The Personnel Research Federation consists of twenty-four educational institutions, nine business firms, five governmental departments, eight other organizations and more than a hundred individuals, all active in furthering research about the occupations and careers of today and the road leading to them.

"The Personnel Research Federation and its affiliated organizations also set to organize and increase the facilities for gathering and distributing information to business and educational institutions that we may be of greatest immediate service."

THOSE INTERESTED — Educational institutions, employers, parents, graduates—in any phase of this human and human problem may receive helpful co-operation from this strictly non-moneymaking organization. Its address is No. 40 W. 40th street.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON JUNE 28, 1927

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON: 1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND: 1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

Nazimova Tells About It

Alan Dale "Discovered" Her

NAZIMOVA, AS THE GYPSY, TELLS ABOUT THE KILLING

One of the good actresses of the period is Nazimova. You see her in this picture as she appears in London in "A Woman of the Earth"; pounding the floor with her fist, telling how she committed a murder by stabbing, defying the law and her accusers.

Nazimova plays the part of a gypsy woman, does it well, and is highly praised by the critics.

This picture reminds you that there are two kinds of criticism, the worthless kind, that likes to hear itself talk, and the CONSTRUCTIVE kind that discovers, encourages and increases reputation.

Alan Dale, dramatic critic of the New York American, and the best dramatic critic in America, possesses wit, knowledge of the drama, and above all, JUDGMENT. About twenty years ago, he saw a troupe of Russian actors playing in a little theatre that philanthropy had hired for them. They spoke no English, but they could ACT.

Alan Dale wrote about these unknown Russians, and said to theatrical managers, "You had better see those Russian actors. There's one woman there, that if taught to speak English, would make money for you, and contribute good work to the stage."

That woman was Nazimova, whom you see in this picture and who has built up an international reputation since Alan Dale told the world about her. First, you must have talent; second, someone must recognize it.

Lost Life Serving Others

Dr. Zingher Saved Hundreds of Children; His Own Four Now Fatherless

"He worked so hard for others that he was simply worn out."

Thus the widow of Dr. Abraham Zingher, famous New York bacteriologist, accurately explains his martyrdom.

Tired after prolonged search for improved ways of protecting the lives of children, he nodded; the gas tube to his bunsen burner was displaced, and a career rich in achievement and brilliant in promise ended prematurely.

The profession of medicine has many examples like that. Almost daily some member of it takes a gamble with death in the effort to find better weapons against disease. Sometimes, like Walter Reed, the conqueror of yellow fever, they win fame. Often they pay the forfeit unnoticed.

Dr. Zingher, an immigrant, at forty-two had won high place among scientists by his skilful work in pathology. Hundreds of children live and are happy because of what he did. His own four tots are now fatherless.

On Knowing Boston

What Does "Pa" Do With His Half-Holiday?

The biggest day of the school year for forty-one pupils of the George W. Brown School of Newburyport was the day "Miss Gould" brought them to Boston.

Some of them have been writing "pieces" about it.

They visited Bunker Hill, where they climbed the Monument; the Navy Yard, where they inspected Old Ironsides and went aboard a destroyer; the State House, and sat in the Senate chair which once was Mr. Coolidge's.

Young Newburyport rode the swan boats in the Public Garden Pond, saw the Hotel Statler—the Wolfe Tavern of Boston—and took in the Aquarium, Franklin Park and the Zoo, the College buildings in Cambridge, Lexington Green and Concord Bridge.

Miss Gould "explained everything," to Jacob Checkoway, Stella Sostak, Alice Kubik, Pauline Kyanka and her other young charges.

THEY'VE got something to remember.

And somehow it occurs to us to inquire whether there may not be Boston boys and girls who have not seen as much of their city.

Boys and girls? How many GROWN-UPS are there in this town who have never visited Old North Church or Paul Revere House, because somehow they "never have been able to get around it?"

We know of few more interesting ways to dispose of six, eight or ten half-holidays than to devote them to a tour of historic Boston, personally conducted by Father.

AIRMEN PIONEERS WHO DARE ALL

By DR. FRANK CRANE

NUNGESSER AND COLI started out in an aircraft flight from Paris to New York. It was a gamble, and a gamble where the penalty was death.

The whole world was interested in their feat. Vast crowds besieged the newspaper offices in Paris and awaited the adventurers in New York.

These men are typical of the kind of man to be found everywhere amongst us. They are the sort of men who flies over the North Pole, who forges his dim and perilous way as a Columbus discovering a new continent, as a western pioneer opening up a new country.

These men are men of courage, resource and indomitable will. How much we all owe to them! Every step in human progress has been marked by their endeavors. Humanity has never made any progress except in the wake of those bold men who thought something was more valuable than life.

Life is precious to us all, and the instinct of its preservation is fundamental. Simply because it is more precious we value those who are ready to risk it for an ideal. We appreciate the heroes in war and those who are none the less heroic in the exploits of peace.

There is no doubt that the business of flying through the air is progressing, but like every other human adventure its way is marked by the tombstones of the adventurers.

There have been adventurers in science, in religion, in commerce and in war. And the disposition to hold life lightly, or to throw it away gaily still characterizes youth.

It is a part of the heroic history of humanity. Perhaps it is that part of it which we would not willingly lose. As most of us would not care to imitate these adventurers, so also we admire them.

Onward humanity takes its way, blazing new paths into the unknown. The progress of the race is not a thing of the past, but it is still going on. There are bold pioneers of thought as well as of action.

"O the prophets, bards and seers
In the galaxy of nations!
They behold the constellations,
They perceive the coming years!"

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

WHO feels about tomorrow or fears the future's blight, who looks ahead to sorrow if but today be bright? Who turns with backward vision to any time gone by, if radiance elysian today illumes the sky? With hopeful hearts we travel to meet what is to be, nor labor to unravel life's skein of mystery, if but today befriend us and bring us deed of cheer the courage it can lend us will linger all the year. So wisdom bids us treasure the boon that come our way and brim with every pleasure the chalice of today; to keep today so shining with love and truth and right no shadow of repining can mar its fresh delight. Who dreams of future hours, who sighs for time long spent if out today's bright bowers are blooming with content?

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

STRICT.

PERSONS having business before the WALTHAM District Court, as well as spectators, have learned that the dignity of the court and the solemnity of the proceedings are to be respected, particularly when ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOSEPH C. HANNON is on the bench. JUDGE HANNON is a stickler for court discipline and does not hesitate to punish offenders.

VETERAN.

More than four-score years old, "BARNEY" BROGAN of Cambridge hasn't missed an annual convention of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters in forty years, according to High Outside Sentinel JOSEPH A. COHALAN, Assistant Registrar at City Hall Annex, Boston.

PLUCK AND LUCK.

CAPTAIN H. E. LACKEY of the U. S. S. Memphis, after bringing COLONEL CHARLES A. LINDBERGH from France, says that the plucky youth considers he was lucky to have picked up Ireland when he did on his epochal flight. "I might have first sighted Norway or Sweden," he quotes "Lindy" as saying. "It was for that reason I carried so much gasoline."

REUNITED.

CHARLES H. SAVAGE of Roxbury, counsel for the Mount Pleasant Improvement Association, reunited a man and wife by quoting SUSAN SPAULDING'S verses on "Fate," as follows:

"Two shall be born this whole wide world apart,
And speak in different tongues, and have no thought
Each of the other's being, and no heed,
And these o'er unknown seas to unknown lands
Shall cross, escaping wreck, defying death;
And, all unconsciously, shape every act
And bend each wandering step to this one end:
That one day, out of darkness they shall meet
And read life's meaning in each other's eyes."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

A STARTLING letter in my morning's mail—

Two university students—girl twenty, boy twenty-one—"madly in love." Want to get married, yet also want to finish college. So they are considering a "Companionate Marriage."

The girl will stay with her parents, the boy will continue to live in his Frat House—they'll spend week-ends together.

"Does perhaps we can settle down and get some work done, instead of spending all our time dreaming about each other," they write.

Perhaps.

Such was Judge Ben Lindsey's aim when he outlined the theory of Companionate Marriage. He, too, thought it would still the restlessness of adolescence and stabilize young lives. But will it work?

I don't think so.

Why? Because it violates sex taboos?

No. Because it violates common sense.

Companionate Marriage calls for a legal union but frees the participants from all of the ordinary marital responsibility and allows them to flit to fresh fields when they weary of their companions. Then, theoretically, after they have flitted enough they will in time find their true mates and settle down and be happy forever after.

That's Bosh

That's bosh. We don't settle down by finding our true mates, in the first or the fiftieth experiment. We settle down by deciding to settle down, and learning, with extreme difficulty, to stay put.

But, is "settling down" so important? Columbus didn't settle down. Lindbergh didn't settle down.

You're wrong. Every human who has ever accomplished anything worth while has settled down. He may not have settled geographically—but he settled spiritually. He sank his psychic fangs into a job and held on, through all the difficulties and discouragements which attended that job. He didn't let go when the first enthusiasm waned.

Stability—that's the basis of civilization. That's the attitude which sets civilized man apart from the jungle savage.

And if you want to get anything out of marriage, you'll have to obey the same old law which governs every other department of human endeavor. You'll have to learn how to stay put.

Companionate Marriage flouts that necessity.

It would allow human beings, at their most plastic age, to indulge in an irresponsible, transient alliance which they could terminate at will. It would set at naught all of humanity's hard won ideals of perseverance and endurance and revert to a primitive jungle code of aimless self-indulgence. In other words it would allow them to become temporary savages.

Fat Chance!

And, after that, I suppose they would become serious, responsible, patient, constant citizens?

Fat chance!

That's why I think that Companionate Marriage is bad medicine. Not because it teaches youngsters to be promiscuous but because it teaches them to prowl. And having once started prowling, they'll almost surely go prowling on for the rest of their lives, always grabbing at new experiences, always dropping them when the gilt is gone, going on and on forever and never getting anywhere.

There's the answer to your question, my young friends.

Companionate Marriage won't turn you into bravos.

It will turn you into bums.

For my name and memory I leave it to men's charitable speeches, to foreign nations, and to the next ages. —Francis Bacon.
